

discounts affect overall profit he relationship between product sales and profitability for different product categories

Product Category Sales Share the monthly trend in the number of orders shipped the composition of profits across various subcategories within different customer segments different customer segments perform in terms of sales and discount rates distribution of order priorities across different product categories average profit per order by product category sales performance of different regions evolve throughout the quarters of a year correlation between discount rates and order quantities profit of different products for different subcategories average order value differ between repeat customers and new customers most commonly used in the Sample Superstore dataset relationship between discounts and sales proportion of orders returned in each region

the monthly trend in the number of orders shipped

compare the shipping time distributions for different shipping modes average delivery duration for different regions and ship modes

Region	Ship Mode
	First Cl..	Same D..	Second ..	Standar..
Central	2.318	0.033	3.331	4.990
East	2.224	0.000	3.266	4.968
South	2.111	0.012	3.195	4.996 sales and profit trends across different product subcategories and regions distribution of order quantities for products in the dataset

